Chapter 1

Wide Awake

'HIIIIIIIIYAAAAAAA!' I check my dynamic pose in the mirror and then look down at my book, A Compendium of Magical Beings to make sure I'm getting it right.

'HEEEEEHHHHAWWWYAAAA!' I say again, adjusting my pose slightly.

It's really late but I can't sleep. A few weeks ago I found out some pretty big news and it's been hard to sleep ever since. You see, I found out that I'm not actually human, and neither is my mum or my uncle Dave.

We're all fairies!

I know what you're thinking—how come I only found out I was a fairy at the grand old age of ten? Well, my suspicions were first aroused when I woke up on my birthday and sprouted a pair of fairy wings. And then my uncle Dave said, 'Jack, you're a fairy, and so am I and so is your mum,' which is when I knew for sure.

Jack the Fairy*

Part of my fairy training is to study A Compendium of Magical Beings, which Mum gave to me. It has pretty much everything you need to know about all the magical creatures in the land, and how it's the job of us fairies to make sure humans live blissfully unaware of the magical creatures going about their business all around them.

THE NIGHT BIGFOOT STOLE MY Pants!

Tonight I'm reading about fighting creatures who might threaten our peaceful existence with humans, like dragons and trolls!

The books says that trolls have a terrific sense of smell and explosive tempers. Oh yeah, and they wear sparkly underwear which they claim has magical properties. This book really is an eye opener.

Jack the Fairy

Reading it is making me want to go on a brave and daring adventure of my own. Sure, I helped some unicorns with a fart issue the other week, but that's been it really. I want to get out there, in the field. Really make a difference, you know?

Mum says I need to learn all the rules of being a fairy before I go on another mission, but there are sooo many to learn! You can't just fly around casting spells whenever you like or the humans will notice. Basically, it breaks down like this:

1. Humans and magical beings exist side by side but humans don't know about us, and that's the way it has to stay. Imagine if a bad person found out magic was real and used it for their own gains—it would be a disaster!

2. Magical beings like goblins, elves, mermaids, fairies, the Easter Bunny, and Santa Claus live among humans in disguise. To access our true form, we hold our noses and blow, like we're trying to make our ears pop. Try it! Although if you turn into a goblin, then on your head be it.

3. The exception is unicorns who live in their natural state, up in the clouds, and fart rainbows for the pleasure of all humankind.

4. It's our job as fairies to protect and serve magical beings and make sure that humans don't find out about us. We get involved if things get messy—if someone tries to kidnap the Easter Bunny or if a troll goes on a rampage for example. Fairies are the fixers of the magical world.

5. All fairies have a wand and can do magic, which is honestly the best part. To cast a spell, all you need to do is wave your wand and sing the thing you want to happen. For example . . . 'Turn that cat into a lion . . . tralalalala!' Argh! 'Turn it back agaaaain, tralalalaargh!' OK, so it was a mistake to sing that while there was an actual cat in the room.

As you can imagine it's a lot to take in, which is why I'm practising my wand technique in the mirror. I'm actually trialling a whole new fairy combat style, combining wand work with martial arts. I call it Taek-wand-oh! Geddit?!

I'm desperate to try out more of my fairy skills for real. I mean, what's the fun of being a fairy, if you can't be out in the world using your skills? I sigh. Oh well, I can still use my wand in the safety of my own bedroom I suppose.

'Pleaaase wand could yooooou... make me a bowl of choco cheeeews?'

I sing to the tune of 'Happy Birthday'. My wand sparkles and twinkles, and then a bowl of delicious cereal materializes in front of me. 'Ooooh, and a free toy!' I say.

I'm just about to slurp straight from the bowl when I hear a strange noise.

'Grrrrr . . .'

'Wow, I was hungrier than I thought,' I say, clutching my belly.

'Grrrrrrroooooowwwwwlllllllll!'

This noise isn't coming from me. It's coming from outside.

I put down my cereal bowl and tiptoe over to my window. I turn off the lamp so it's completely dark and then I open the curtains.

Our back garden is small and backs onto a bit of scrubland. It's just a few trees between the rows of houses—no one really uses it and I've always found it a bit spooky. It's especially spooky tonight because now I'm sure that's where the strange noise is coming from.

'GRRRRRRRRRRRRRR!'

There it is again, but louder this time. I duck to the floor, my heart pounding. And then I remember I am a fairy and it's my job to investigate! Very carefully, I raise my head up and peep over the windowsill. There's a dark shadow moving through our garden. It is heading purposefully towards the washing line.

I grab my wand and thrust my feet into my slippers. There's no time to wake up Mum or call Uncle Dave so I'm going to have to investigate on my own. It's time for my first solo fairy adventure!
