

But at night, when the streets were empty,
Matisse did what he loved most. He drew!

His drawings were like tiny works of art.

It was a pity then that no one ever noticed them.

One moonlit night, Matisse
found himself in a quiet
spot in the heart of the city.

It was a perfect
place for drawing.

